
SRI LANKA: North crying out for more private investment

Contributed by Administrator
Monday, 18 October 2010
Last Updated Sunday, 16 January 2011

"Private investments are very important to wean away the people from over 25 years of dependence on relief and welfare handouts from the government, NGOs, donors, et al, and steer them towards self-sustenance," Muttukrishna Sarvananthan, lead researcher at the Point Pedro Institute of Development based in the northern city of Jaffna, told IRIN. "If not, the Vanni will remain a perpetual basket case."

<http://www.irinnews.org/Report.aspx?ReportId=90743>